The tax year is sometimes also called the "fiscal year". A company's accounting year, which has some relevance for corporation tax purposes, can be chosen by the company and often runs from 1 April to 31 March, in line with the fiscal year. The British personal tax year runs from 6 to 5 April in the following year. [circular reference]

In a piece published in the March issue of the British Tax Review (available on Westlaw and here), I look at the recent case of Ingenious Media. This is a case I have blogged about on numerous occasions (here, here, here and here). The case note is lengthy as it deals with the decision not just of the Supreme Court in the case, but also the decisions in the Administrative Court and Court of Appeal.
